

Abstract of the Disclosure

A new element is generated by joining the contents of elements relatively at the same position among a plurality of records of a structured document. Next, a new record that includes the new element and inherits the relative position relationship of the elements within the records is generated. The plurality of records are then replaced with the new record.

10

15